TOPIC: Engineering Fasteners

George Bollinger shared a lifetime of experience with engineering fasteners.

“During my apprenticeship and trade as a fitter/ turner I learnt to make threads of various types. Over half my working career as a professional mechanical engineer has been spent working with fasteners. At some point every day we all rely on fasteners to perform a function for us. They are an item that we often take for granted, only to sometimes discover too late just how important they can be.”

George has offered to return as a guest speaker later in 2022.

At this future meeting George will share his experiences as an emergency relief volunteer after the 2021 New South Wales bush fires.
